Michal Rovner Writings

Ivorypress is pleased to present Writings, the latest book in the LiberArs series, made in collaboration with the Israeli artist Michal Rovner.

Composed of a series of leporello pages, this book transmits the dense textuality that defines Michal Rovner's work as well as her interest in words, time and memory. In this publication, the artist goes beyond the limits of writing to consider the residue left by time on the written and the printed word.

Rovner's art is characterised by its abundant materiality; her large-scale works are immersive, both physically and at the level of temporality. Despite the challenge presented by adapting these characteristics to the format of the LiberArs series, Rovner successfully translates the grandeur of her works onto pages that unfold into space. Each interior leporello condenses visual codes presented by abstracted human notations. The zigzagging line they trace when opened calls to mind comings and goings that dilate time through their repetition. Extending the book's pages reveals an elongated format, similar to analogue film reels where movement is registered frame by frame. The book is composed of four fold-out pages that, when closed, bring together the temporal layers that create a compacted, closed book. An earthen-coloured block, reminiscent of the archaeological nature of Rovner's work, as if it were a brick or a block of stone.

The LiberArs series is a collection of small-format artists' books published by Ivorypress and designed by the artists themselves. Since the publication of the first series edition in 2009, Ivorypress has collaborated with artists including Gerhard Richter, Anselm Kiefer, Richard Long, Santiago Sierra and Jenny Holzer, among others.
